- Although we know March as the third month of the year, it wasn't always so! In the oldest Roman calendars, the year was just ten months long, and March was the first month. January and February weren't added until about 700 B.C., and March became the third month. It was named for Mars, the Roman god of war.
- On March 20 or 21 each year, the sun is directly above the equator, making the day and night of equal length. This phenomenon is known as the Vernal Equinox, the first day of Spring in the Northern Hemisphere. The word "equinox" has its roots in Latin, translating "equal night."
- March 6, 1836 was the day the Alamo fell to Mexican troops after a 13-day siege under the command of General Antonio Santa Anna in the midst of the Texas Revolution. The Alamo mission was occupied by about 250 Americans, including soldiers, clergy, slaves, women, and children. The garrison was attacked by approximately 1,500 Mexican soldiers. It's estimated that about 190 U.S. soldiers were killed, including frontiersman Jim Bowie and folk hero Davy Crockett. About 60, primarily civilians, survived.
- The Ides of March in the Roman calendar was the 74th day of the year, equivalent to March 15. It was a day for religious observances, sacred to Jupiter, the Romans' supreme deity. It was also a deadline for settling debts. Mostly we think of the Ides of March as the day of Julius Caesar's assassination. In 44 BC, a clairvoyant told Caesar that his demise would occur no later than that date. Caesar disregarded the prophecy, and on that day, sneered at the seer, "The Ides of March have come," to which the seer replied, "Aye, Caesar, but not gone." As Caesar sat in a senate meeting at the Theatre of Pompey, conspirators attacked the ruler, stabbing him 23 times. The attackers, members of the Senate, marched through Rome following the assassination announcing, "People of Rome, we are once again free!"

• Basketball's NCAA tournament known as "March Madness" determines the champion team from the Division I level of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. It was the brainstorm of Ohio State coach Harold Olsen, and in 1939, eight teams – Oregon, Texas, Oklahoma, Utah State, Villanova, Brown, Wake Forest, and Ohio State – competed for the title, with Oregon winning the championship game against Ohio 46-33. In 1951, the tournament was expanded to 16 teams, then to 32 in 1975. By 1985, the field was 64 teams, and is currently 68. UCLA has won the most national titles, with 11 wins. A women's tournament was added in 1982, with Louisiana Tech taking the championship. The women's field is also 68 teams. Although the tourney has been held since 1939, it wasn't until 1982 when sportscaster Brett Musberger used the term "March Madness" during television coverage that the name really stuck.

• The Eiffel Tower was ascended for the very first time on March 31, 1889. Because the elevators were not yet operating, the group of government officials, along with members of the press, made the trek on foot, a climb that took over an hour, as Gustave Eiffel stopped along the way to point out the structure's features. Construction began on the wrought-iron tower in 1887 as the main attraction for the upcoming Paris World's Fair in 1889. It was completed in 2 years, 2 months, and 5 days with no serious injuries or deaths during the process. Standing 1,083 feet tall, about the height of an 81-story building, it was the tallest structure in the world for 41 years until New York City's Chrysler Building surpassed it in 1930. Nearly 7 million people visit the Tower every year.

• In March of 1973, the eighth studio album by the English rock band Pink Floyd, "The Dark Side of the Moon," landed on Billboard's Top 200 album chart, eventually making it up to Number 1. The album remained on the Top 200 for a record-breaking 741 weeks, setting a record that still remains unbroken. If you count the addition of Billboard's Catalog Albums chart, which classifies older LPs still selling well, "The Dark Side of the Moon" is still on the charts. It's been certified 14x platinum in the U.K., and has sold upwards of 45 million copies worldwide. The album has nothing to do with astronomy, but rather the songs deal with the subjects of conflict, wealth and greed, time, mental illness, and death.

• The first-ever telephone call was made on March 10, 1876 by Alexander Graham Bell to his 27-year-old assistant Thomas Watson. Bell himself was just 29 and had received a patent for his invention only three days earlier, U.S. Patent 174465A for a method of transmitting speech by telegraphy. Bell's words, "Mr. Watson, come here. I want you" from the room next door were a bit crackly, but understandable.

• Within a few months, Bell was transmitting conversations between Boston, Massachusetts, and the nearby community of Somerville. Bell co-founded the American Telephone and Telegraph Company (AT&T) in 1885. The Scottish-born Bell was no stranger to inventing. At age 12, he had created a device for de-husking grain, which was put into operation at nearby mills. What happened to Thomas Watson? He went to work for Bell at his telephone company, and invented the telephone ringer, which signaled folks when a call was coming in. He used his royalties to buy a farm, but moved on to founding a ship and engine building company that built naval destroyers for the U.S. military. By 1900, it was one of the largest shipyards in the nation, which Watson later sold to Bethlehem Steel. Watson not only received the very first phone call, he was also the recipient of the first transcontinental call, made from Bell's New York City office to Watson in San Francisco. The phone receivers were then handed to the mayors of each city to speak to each other.

• Who knew there is a special day set aside to honor the fanny pack? March 9 is International Fanny Pack Day, first designated in 2007. It was inspired by a man on his way home from a Christmas party, who encountered a homeless man. At the party, Nick Yates had been given two gag gifts – a fruitcake and a fanny pack. Stuffing the cake in the pack, Yates headed toward the bus stop. He gave the cake to the homeless man, and was struck with the idea of a co-op with food banks to hand out food to homeless while wearing fanny packs. Yates created a charitable campaign and International Fanny Pack Day was born!

a good living working as a dog walker or a pet sitter? — Barry J., Cambridge, Massachusetts
DEAR BARRY: I know more than a few people who are full-time pet sitters and dog walkers. Most have their own business, while a few are employees of pet care companies. As you can imagine, the pay rates vary widely from person to person. ZipRecruiter reports that the average hourly wage, nationally, for pet sitters is about $19.23.
 I think it's great that you're considering a career change. But I recommend testing out the world of pet sitting first. Consider working part time for a pet-sitting company. Even better, if you know someone who does dog walking, ask to accompany them for one day to see what their job entails. Find out what the pitfalls of this business may be, and what makes it fun to do. Finally, offer to pet sit for a friend who's going out of town for a day or two to get direct experience and really see if it's

Winter Strawberry-Rhubarb Supreme

2 cups chopped frozen rhubarb, thawed
1 cup hot water
3/4 cup sugar
2 (4-serving) packages Jell-O sugar-free strawberry gelatin
1 (8-ounce) can crushed pineapple, packed in fruit juice, undrained
2 cups frozen unsweetened strawberries, thawed, coarsely chopped and undrained
1 (8-ounce) package Philadelphia fat-free cream cheese
1/2 teaspoon coconut extract
1 cup Cool Whip Lite
2 tablespoons flaked coconut

1. In a large saucepan, combine rhubarb, hot water and 1/2 cup Splenda. Cover and cook on medium heat for 6 to 8 minutes or until rhubarb softens. Remove from heat.

2. Add dry gelatin. Mix well to dissolve gelatin. Stir in undrained pineapple. Add undrained strawberries. Mix well to combine. Pour mixture into an 8-by-8-inch dish. Refrigerate until firm, about 3 hours.

3. In a small bowl, stir cream cheese with a sturdy spoon until soft. Add remaining 1/4 cup Splenda and coconut extract. Mix well to combine. Fold in Cool Whip Lite. Spread topping mixture evenly over set filling. Evenly sprinkle coconut over top.

4. Refrigerate for at least 30 minutes. Cut into 8 servings.

RECIPE BROUGHT TO YOU COURTESY OF Graceville Market, Graceville, MN

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Stop being the wool-gathering Lamb, and start turning that dream project into reality. You have the ideas, the drive and the charisma to persuade others to follow your lead. So do it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've scored some big successes. But remember that all hard-working Ferdinands and Ferdinandas need some time to restore their energies and refresh their spirits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're gaining a stronger mental image of what you're trying to achieve. Now, look for the facts that will help get this to develop from a concept into a solid proposal.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some of you eager-to-please Moon Children might want to delay some decisions until midweek, when you can again think more with your head than your heart.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A new business venture seems to offer everything you've been looking for. But be careful that this rosy picture doesn't betray traces of red ink under the surface.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A volatile situation needs the kind of thoughtful and considerate care you can provide right now. There'll be plenty of time later to analyze what might have gone wrong.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your loyalty to a friend in a tough situation earns you respect from people you care about. Those who criticize you don't understand what friendship is all about.

Unscramble these twelve letter strings to form each into an ordinary word (ex. HAGNEC becomes CHANGE). Prepare to use only ONE word from any marked (♥) letter string as each unscrambles into more than one word (ex. ♥RATHE becomes HATER or EARTH or HEART). Fit each string's word either across or down to knot all twelve strings together.

PEOPLE WORTH REMEMBERING:
IRENA SENDLER

Thousands of people are alive today due to the efforts of a 30-year-old Polish social worker named Irena Sendler. Here's the story of this remarkable woman.

• In 1939, when the Nazis invaded Warsaw, Poland, Irena Sendler was a social worker, working in the city's canteens that offered food, shelter, medicine, and clothing to the city's persecuted Jews, who were registered at the facility under fictitious Christian names. In October, 1940, more than 400,000 Jews were forced into a locked area about the size of New York's Central Park. As she observed thousands dying every month from disease and starvation, the 30-year-old Sendler joined Zegota, an underground organization formed to help Jews.

• Sendler's burden for the Jewish people came from her childhood, when she had lost her father to typhus when she was 7. He had contracted the disease from those he treated that his fellow physicians refused to help out of fear of the disease. After his death, because of his sacrifice for the Jewish community, its leaders offered financial help for Irena's education.

• As a social worker of the Contagious Disease Department, Sendler had papers that allowed her to enter the Ghetto. Her mission became the saving of Jewish orphan children by placing them in the safety of convents or locating non-Jewish families to adopt them. She had several methods to smuggle the children out, including hiding them under a stretcher that was being loaded onto an ambulance. Some were carried out in caskets, potato sacks, body bags, trunks, or suitcases, while others escaped through sewer pipes or underground tunnels. A Catholic church straddled the boundary of the Ghetto, one with two entrances – a door into the Ghetto and a door into the Aryan side. Irena and Zegota members also prepared false documents that enabled the orphans to exit the church freely.

• As the conditions in the Ghetto became even more dreadful, Sendler expanded her rescue efforts beyond orphans and asked Jewish parents to allow her to get their children to safety. With a plan to reunite rescued children with their families after the war, using a special code, she carefully recorded all the children's original names, their new identities, and their location. All the information was placed in glass jars which were buried under an apple tree in her neighbor's backyard, ironically, across the street from German barracks. The jars contained names of more than 2,500 children saved by her and her colleagues.

• Unfortunately, the Nazis became aware of Sendler's activities. In October, 1943, she was arrested and sent to Pawiak Prison, where she was tortured as the Gestapo broke her feet and legs in an attempt to get her to betray her colleagues and reveal locations of the children. Refusing to give up any information, she was sentenced to death by a firing squad. Posters announcing her upcoming execution were posted throughout the city. But the Zegota organization came to her aid by bribing the German executioner, a person who helped her Sendler escape at the last minute.

• Pursued by the Gestapo, she was forced to go into hiding until the end of the war, continuing her work as she could. At the end of the war, as the only one who knew the location of the children's identities, Sendler dug up the jars and attempted to bring the families together. Tragically, nearly all of the parents had perished at the Polish death camp Treblinka.

• In 1965, Sendler was honored by Israel's Yad Vashem as "Righteous among the Nations."

APPLE PEELERS

Between 1803 and 1900, approximately 250 U.S. patents were filed for designs of apple peelers. One of the first designs was in the late 1700s.

Apples were a major crop in the U.S., and the evolution of kitchen tools like apple peelers significantly sped up fall harvesting chores. Apple peelers were taken to neighbors' houses for annual "paring bees," where men operated the hand-cranked machines, and women completed the finer work of quartering, slicing and stringing the apples for drying. Dried apple slices were stored in bags and used to make applesauce or pies or for other culinary uses throughout the winter season.

Apple paring bees not only served a vital function to harvest food but were also popular social events. An unmarried man or woman would toss apple peelings over their left shoulder and try to see if they formed the initials of a future spouse.

Q: Do old tin toys have any value? My dad was born on a small farm in 1916 and rarely had any store-bought toys, but he had a windup tin car that goes into a garage and a tin airplane. The airplane has a grooved wheel that would make it roll down a string tied between two objects. The plane is missing part of its tail piece. There is no maker's name on either toy. I don't want to sell them, but I'd like to know if they are valuable.

A: Tin toys were made in the United States, Germany, France and England beginning in the early 1800s. The "Golden Age" of tin toys was from about 1865 to 1914. The first lithographed tin toy cars were made about 1900, a few years after automobiles became more common than horse-drawn carriages. Cars that replicated real model cars were made by 1930. Tin toys were made in Japan after the end of World War II. Many were made from scrap tin from beer cans discarded by American soldiers. Others were made in factories from sheet metal. Old tin toys are collectible if they are in good condition. Windup toys and other toys that move bring the highest prices. Some sell for over $100, and a few sell for over $1,000.

TIP: Marble will eventually react to rain and deteriorate. Keep marble ornaments out of the rain and frost.

LIARS

Liar, liar, pants on fire! Who lies and why? This week, Tidbits tells the truth about lies!

- Prevaricator, falsifier, deceiver, perjurer ... no matter what you call them, it's a person who does not tell the truth, one who makes "an intentionally false statement." Why do we do it? There are many reasons we do it, but almost always it's for some degree of self-protection, to prevent damage to one's reputation, and to avoid confronting facts and feelings.
- Research supports the concept that 95% of people cannot go an entire week without telling at least one lie. A "National Geographic" report indicates that 59% of those between 18 and 44 lie between one and five times every day, with 15% lying more than five times a day. A university study reveals that 18.1% of the study's participants lie every day. These "daily liars" exhibited lower grade point averages, quality of life, and self-esteem. Most tend to be insecure, manipulative, or distrustful.
- While most people tell the occasional lie, compulsive liars tell lies for no apparent reason, when there is no reason to even do so. Also called habitual liars, they lie without premeditation, making things up on the spot. The lies are frequently ridiculous and impossible to believe, yet the liar is adamant they are true. Compulsive liars are pretty easy to spot – they avoid eye contact, often break out in a sweat, and have difficulty staying focused while talking. They might move things around on the table or move farther away from the person they're talking to. They frequently ramble on and then move ahead abruptly to change the subject. Their stories don't usually add up, and when they forget their first lie, they improvise a new one in its place. These liars actually feel uncomfortable telling the truth! Compulsive lying is usually a symptom of a personality disorder.

- Similarly, "prolific" liars are prone to believing that lying is acceptable in some circumstances, but not out of concern for others, rather for their own self-interest. Research indicates that they tell about 19 lies for every one lie told by the average person.
- While you can often spot the compulsive liar's falsehoods, it's not so easy with a pathological liar. They are excellent liars because they do it regularly, making it difficult to distinguish the truth from their lies. They are typically charming and likeable folks, trying to make themselves the center of attention. Many times, they don't even realize that what they say isn't true, and even believe the lie themselves. These manipulative prevaricators will admit their lies only when their statements are proven false and have no remorse or guilt after being caught. The lying begins when the person is young and can continue indefinitely in every area of life. The medical term for pathological lying is "pseudologia fantastica."
- Those with a narcissistic personality tell lies to boost their image, inventing impressive, far-fetched stories centered around themselves as heroes. Sometimes their story is based on truth, but then is wildly embellished.
- Some people tell "white lies," which are often to make another person feel better, or to avoid hurting their feelings, when the truth might be offensive. What's the correct response to "Do these pants make me look fat?" White liars might mix the truth and some tact with the lie to prevent damage to another's emotions.
- The good news is that most people are honest and tell a lie only occasionally, and when they do, they feel guilty about it, admit it, and beg forgiveness. When confronted with the lie, they are truly sorry and desire to make things right and instigate change in their lives.

• Among the many reuses for plastic newspaper bags: Put soiled diapers in before putting in a trash can. Use to pick up after your pet on a walk. Fill with grocery store plastic bags for storage. Keep a few to store wet swimsuits in after a trip to the beach or pool.

• Before removing a splinter, ice the area. Less fussing and a wooden splinter might absorb some liquid, causing it to swell enough to pop out a bit more.

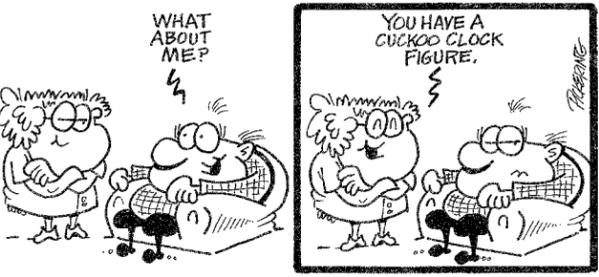

• Recycling paper is good, but reusing before recycling is even better. Ask your child's classroom teacher if he or she has a "both sides" policy for lined papers. Also, copy paper that's printed on only one side can be quartered for quick scratch paper.

binoculars. You'd be surprised how much you can see from the ground, and you can do a cursory examination and then decide if anything needs a closer look.

- Cut kitchen sponges into smaller pieces. They clean as well as a larger sponge, and you can dispose of the smaller pieces when they get yucky. -- O.C. in Michigan
- Need sliced mushrooms for your salad or recipe? They are hard to cut, but you might have a perfect tool for doing the job already in your kitchen. If you have an egg slicer, get it out. It works very well for mushrooms, and it's easier to use than trying to cut those slices yourself. -- J.R. in Utah
