TIDBITS® SPEAKS

FRENCH

by Janet Spencer

Come along with Tidbits as we consider the French connection to the English language!

THE FRENCH CONNECTION

- The word "norman" means "north man" in the Norse language. Vikings settled the coast of what is now France and intermingled with other Europeans living in the area. This ethnic group became known as the Normans, settling a region now known as Normandy.
- In the year 1066, the Normans invaded England in the Norman Conquest. Afterwards, England was ruled by the Normans who spoke Anglo-Norman French, causing French words to infiltrate the English language. French words have continued to make their way into the English language. Here are some examples.

EN FRANCAIS

- The French word "camouflet" means "a puff of smoke" and the phrase "se camouflet" means "to shroud oneself in smoke." On busy streets, pickpockets would employ the help of a beautiful accomplice called a "camouflette" who would engage an intended victim by blowing cigarette smoke in his face, which was considered a come-on. While the mark was distracted, the pickpocket would move in. Today we employ "camouflage" to hide what we are doing.
- In France, "avant garde" means literally "front guard" and refers to the advance party riding in front of an army on the move. The rear guard would be riding behind the army to be sure no one was coming up from behind. Eventually "avant garde" came to mean anyone or anything who is leading the way in social reform or innovative change.
- The French "cadet" meaning "junior chief" originally referred to the youngest son of any noble family, who could take his chances in the army because he was so far down in the line of succession that he could afford to die in the war. In England, the word "cadet" was applied to soldiers without rich and influential parents who entered at a low level and worked their way up. Officers would often call them "caddies." When officers took up the game of golf, these caddies would come along to do the hauling. Later, upper classmen in English boarding schools called the lower classmen "cads."

• In French, "funkier" means "to give off smoke" and the word "funk" came to mean any pall of smoke or cloud of offensive smell. During World War I, a "funk hole" was a recess dug into the wall of a trench to escape from gas attacks. Today, being "in a funk" denotes being under the cloud of a bad mood, while something that was "funky" was originally something found in a smoky bar.

• The word "petarde" means a loud series of farts. In the 1500s, the word was applied to primitive bombs used to blow open holes in walls or gates. They were notoriously sensitive and tended to blow unexpectedly, often throwing the bomber high into the air. This led to the phrase "hoisted by his own petard" meaning someone doomed by his own efforts. The phrase was first used in Shakespeare's play "Hamlet."

• Hors d'œuvre: "apart from the work" meaning "outside of the main course."

• The French "numpire" means a "non-peer" indicating a person who is impartial. That morphed into "an umpire."

• The phrase "carte blanche" means "white cards" denoting a situation where someone can impose whatever conditions they choose. During war time, a senior officer would sign the bottom of a report before the report was written, giving the blank paper, or "carte blanc," to a junior officer, so he could fill in whatever details he wanted.

• The phrase "avant pied" means "above the foot" referring to the top part of a shoe or boot. Cobblers often repaired or replaced this part of the footwear. The phrase was abbreviated when it entered the English language as "vamp." Because most cobblers focused on refurbishing old boots instead of creating new shoes, to "revamp" came to mean improving something that was run-down. In music, to "vamp" meant to jazz up an old tune with new embellishments, and slinky women dancing seductively to such music were "vamping it up."

• Baron Dominique Jean Larrey was Napoleon's personal physician and also the Surgeon-in-Chief of the French army. He proposed to Napoleon that he be allowed to set up what was called "hopital ambulant" which is French for "walking hospital." These were litters carried onto the battlefields by medics who did their best to tend the walking wounded. In later years, hand-held litters were replaced by horse-drawn wagons called "ambulants volantes" meaning "flying-walkers." The British adopted the system of stretcher-bearers, and the English word for them became "ambulance." The French word "ambulant" (originally from Latin) is also the root of "ambulatory" and "amble."

• Parachute: "protection against falling" Parasol: "protection against the sun"

from British control to French control. In Acadia in 1755, all of the French residents who refused to take an oath honoring the English were evicted from the area. Many of them re-settled in the French territory of Louisiana, where they were called "Acadians" and then "Cadians" and finally "Cajuns."

- Until 1953, New York City had a pneumatic tube mail network that spanned 27 miles and connected 23 post offices. At its peak, the system moved 95,000 letters a day at speeds of 30-35 mph.
- Halloween is more Irish than St. Patrick's Day.
- Ever wonder how the dice game Yahtzee got its curious moniker? A wealthy Canadian couple invented the game as a way of entertaining friends on board their yacht. After it proved a hit, the couple consulted a toy maker who loved it, bought the rights, and changed the original name from the generic "Yacht game" to "Yahtzee."
- Homer Simpson's famous "D'oh!" is a real word in the Oxford English Dictionary, though in "The Simpsons" scripts, it's rendered merely as an "annoyed grunt."

- Tigers, jaguars and leopards love the smell of Calvin Klein's "Obsession For Men"! Photographers who used the fragrance to lure the big cats to their cameras in the wild said the cats "would start drooling, their eyes would half-close, almost like they were going into a trance."

- Five ways to keep yourself from turning up the thermostat this winter: Put on a sweater; have a nice bowl of soup or stew; wear slippers or thick nonskid socks, grab a comfy blanket; snuggle up with someone special.
- "If you bathe in a tub, try rubbing on bath oil before getting in the tub. You will get greater coverage and more moisturizing power from your bath oil. And at this time of year, who doesn't need that?" -- M.E. in Washington
- "Here's a great way to use Christmas cards from last year: Trace a child's hand on the back of the pictures. Cut them out and use them to make a wreath for the front door. Or, make small jigsaw puzzles for young children to play with. Any good, detailed artwork on a card front will do. Make squiggly lines in the fashion of a jigsaw puzzle, then cut out. It helps if the cardstock is good and thick." -- M.M. in Utah
- "To keep light bulbs from sticking in the socket, apply petroleum jelly to the base of the bulb before screwing it into the fixture." -- B.D. in Virginia
- Here's an oldie but a goodie: Add a few drops of water to votive cups before adding a candle. The wax will float on the water, and when the candle burns down, it won't get stuck in the votive glass.
- "Burned rice? No problem. While it's still hot, carefully remove to a new pot any rice not browned or blackened. Then top it with a single slice of white bread. Allow it to sit for several minutes under a tightly fitted lid. The burned smell is absorbed by the bread, and the rice is fit to eat." -- M.U. in Michigan

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting
By Terry and Kim Kovel

Clever Table

A table has four legs and a flat top -- except when it is designed by a clever cabinetmaker. Freeman's Auction in Philadelphia sold an unusual rosewood table with two partial shelves built below the 20-inch square tabletop. It is decorated with carved dragons on the brackets and a spider and fly inlay of mixed metal and mother-of-pearl. The Anglo-Japanese inlaid rosewood table was made by A. and H. Lejambre of Philadelphia around 1880; the company produced work from 1865 to 1907. Similar tables are in several museums. The table sold at auction for $13,000.

This unusual table is an example of Anglo-Japanese style. It has a look that was not favored by many cabinetmakers. The table with wooden tiers and carved dragons sold at auction for $13,000.

Q: My parents bought a home in Florida and purchased the contents, including an interesting table used as a lamp table. The top flips to one side, doubling its surface, and can be raised for storage. Open, it measures 17 inches high by 34 inches square. A label reads "Williams-Kimp Furniture Co., Grand Rapids, Mich." Could you tell me more about this table and its value?

A: Game tables were popular during the 18th and 19th centuries -- first in England, and then in the United States. Cabinetmakers designed clever tables suitable for writing letters and for pastimes like playing cards, chess or backgammon. The tables looked like regular tables when not in use. Some had a hinged top that folded, swiveled or slid open to reveal a playing surface. Others had a game board inlaid on top. The Williams-Kimp Furniture Co. started in Grand Rapids in 1923. It was purchased by Baker Furniture in 1951. The company made reproductions of American Federal furniture including dining sets, secretaries, desks, chairs and pieces like your game table. Your table is worth about $175 to $225.

Q: I have 11 Imperial Glass

Can They Give Gift to Their Doctor?

DEAR DR. ROACH: We are very fond of our family doctor. I was in to see him the other day, and it came up in conversation that he was going to be getting married. We would like to acknowledge this event in his life with either a lovely card or a small gift. I know the old-school way of thinking is to never do things that are so personal when it comes to your physician. Do you think that still holds true today? -- N.W.

ANSWER: Physicians are human beings, and a thoughtful card is always appreciated. Gifts can sometimes be OK, but the American Medical Association has some guidelines for physicians on accepting gifts. I agree with them and you might find them helpful:

-- Be sensitive to the size of the gift: Inappropriately large gifts should not be accepted.

A set with the punch bowl and six cups was offered for sale for $95. Whirling Star punch cups in other colors sell for about $5 or $6. The set has been reproduced.

- Do not let a gift influence patient care.
- Decline a gift that would present an emotional or financial hardship to the patient's family.
- Consider suggesting a charitable contribution in lieu of a gift.

I would add that sometimes rejecting a gift can be hurtful, and if accepting a gift conforms to the guidelines, I generally accept it with thanks.
